From: Basler Product Management
Date: 13. November 2019
Subject: Basler pilot camera family end of life

Reasons for discontinuation: Discontinuation of critical part (Sensor)

Basler pilot cameras have been in the market for more than 12 years. The discontinuation of the most critical parts, the CCD sensors by OnSemiconductor, has led us to the decision to stop the production of all remaining pilot cameras. For this reason, we have to announce the discontinuation of our Basler pilot family.

Basler pilot cameras are being retired according to the schedule specified below. Basler has no longer the means to procure additional material after January 31st 2020. However, we will stock a certain amount of sensors. Starting end of January, with limited availability of inventory, we can only take orders on a first come first serve basis as long as order receipt can be fulfilled with existing inventory. Basler will update about the remaining stock level at the Basler Website.

Please also note that due to unpredictable order entries the delivery time may reach 12 weeks after order entry.

We would like to discuss the alternatives for your requirement with you personally in a close cooperation. Please contact your local sales representative for assistance.
